

In case of any real issue between the delegations, the decisions of the delegates of the allies and America must prevail; the representatives of the defeated powers may plead and argue, but they must submit for the simple reason the people from whom they speak are bereft of any military or naval resources with which to renew the war or to offer any physical resistance.

The coming great peace conference will surpass any in history; not only because of the tremendous importance of the issues with which it must deal, but also literally in size. Indications are that the United States government will be represented by at least half a dozen principals, with a numerous body of secretaries, chancellors, translators and clerks, and it is assumed that over the smallest of the nations which will participate will seek to make a show in point of number of delegates.

This fact may involve the transaction of most of the business of the conference by selected committees which will represent in their composition every element and whose reports will come before the full conference for ratification.

The greatest war in history ended this morning at 6 o'clock, Washington time, after 1,567 days of horror during which virtually the whole civilized world has been convulsed.

Announcement of the tremendous event was made at the state department at the capitol at 2:15 o'clock this morning and in a few seconds was flashed throughout the continent by the Associated Press.

Details of the terms dictated by Marshal Foch on Friday forenoon to the German armistice delegates have not been given out, but it is believed they are of such a nature as to protect the world from a resumption of the struggle by the Germans. It is assumed that they call for the demobilization of Germany's army, the surrender of part of her fleet and the dismantling of the rest and the evacuation of occupied portions of France and Belgium and of Alsace-Lorraine. It is probable also that Germany has agreed to call home all her troops now in Russia and Roumania.

THANKFULNESS IS DOMINANT NOTE IN EXPRESSIONS OF ALBUQUERQUEANS ON PEACE

What "The Day" Means to Business and Professional Men of This City, Who Could Take Time From Shouting to Talk; Gratitude to Those Who Have Made It Possible; to the Men Who Have Sacrificed Their Lives; Optimistic Outlook for the Future; Are Sentiments Mainly Expressed.

"The Day" has at last dawned for the civilized world and "The Day" to white, the king and his household have been driving their teams from blood-filled streets during these years of suffering and desolation, but the day which dawns in a new era of peace and brotherly love.

Expressions of thankfulness that the curtain has finally been lowered upon the last act of the bloody drama of strife to those who have made this great victory possible, sorrowful and tender tribute to the memory of those who have given their lives in the great cause of civilization at the responsibilities confronting us, and an enthusiastic anticipation of the great period which lies before us, such are a few of the sentiments expressed by some of the leading men of this city on what "The Day" means to them.

"There is one day in human history which stands apart from all others," said Dr. W. A. Webber, "and that is the birthday of Christ."

"This is the birthday of July," said C. M. Beckwith, with his characteristic happy quality of seeing a lot in a few words.

"The great war in which for over four years the civilized portion of the world has paled toward us at times with no little anxiety, has now come to an end," said S. J. Vandy.

"It follows closely upon the heels of Germany's seventh hour of revolution. Christ, the God of justice and democracy has at last provided over those enemies of the human race—autocracy, imperialism and autocracy. The Hun, with their hordes to the south, have not shown the endurance that is possessed by the free peoples of the world, but our evaluations are tempered by the memory of those who have given their lives that the world may have been free and secure."

"More can be done now, however, whereby the French dead may know that they have not made the supreme sacrifice in vain."

"The great work which confronts the education institutions of this country," said Prof. John Munn, "is now one of peace instead of war. They must do their part toward making democracy safe for the world."

"Our job is not yet completed, however. We still have a most important duty which has more to do with how to organize to the greatest advantage the League to Enforce Peace."

"This victory means only the end of the war," said P. E. Wood, "but it means the end of kingship throughout the world and the beginning of the rule of the people."

"The great problem which lies before us now is to prepare for the returning soldiers, to the better of E. J. Strong. When the period of demobilization is over, we believe that America will enter upon the greatest era of prosperity it has ever known."

"There may be a slight languor depression at a time," said J. A. Weinman, "but things are sure to begin after it is over, to any man or woman who left the environment of the war were excepted to be somewhat come down in the world."

America's Department of the Marine says there is no change in the business men of this city to whom "The Day" means much. Mr. DeMolli has two brothers over there—one with the American army in France and another with the Italian army. This is the birthday of one of these brothers, and is also the birthday of King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy.

"Delighted, of course, Charles E. Wood, in read his speech in this connection asked how he felt about this day. I believe this day marks a date in history from now to the end of eternity."

"This day means the democratization of the world," said A. B. McGaffey. "There will be no more monarchy. The period which lies ahead of us will be one of the greatest industrial prosperity in history."

"In what a different way might we have reacted to this day if the United States had not entered upon the great struggle," said M. E. Hickey. "In all probability it would have been the Germans who would be doing the shooting."

"These days have not lost any of their luster in this war," said A. B. McGaffey. "The day is here again to come again to us again today." He was a member of the Maxons and Erks judges. The body was shipped last night to Brownell. C. T. French was in charge.

Twenty-five.—Freedom of access to the Baltic to be given to the naval and mercantile marine of the United States of America shall be granted to Germany by the Central Powers.

Twenty-six.—The allies and the United States of America shall have the right to sweep up all mine fields and obstructions laid by Germany outside German territorial waters and the portions of these are to be immediately discontinued.

Twenty-seven.—Freedom of access to the Black Sea ports and the Dardanelles will be granted to the Central Powers.

Twenty-eight.—All naval aircrafts to be concentrated and immobilized in German bases to be specified by the allies and the United States of America.

Twenty-nine.—In evacuating the Belgian coast and ports, Germany shall abandon all merchant ships, tugs, lighters, cranes and all other harbor materials, all materials for land reclamation, all air craft and all materials and stores, all arms and armaments, and all stores and apparel of all kinds.

Twenty-nine.—All Black Sea ports and the Dardanelles will be open to all shipping by Germany, all shipping seized by Germany in the Black Sea and the United States of America; all neutral vessels retained are to be released; all warlike and other materials of all kinds seized in those waters are to be returned and German materials as specified on cause twenty-eight are to be condemned.

Thirty.—All merchant vessels in German harbors belonging to the allied and associated powers are to be released and placed in ports as specified by the allies and the United States of America without restriction.

Thirty-one.—No destruction of ships or materials to be permitted before evacuation, surrender or restoration.

Thirty-two.—The German government will notify the neutral governments of the social and particularly the governmental of Norway, Sweden, Finland, Poland and Lithuania all restrictions placed on the trading of their vessels with the allied and associated countries, whether by the German government or by private German interests and whether all returns for specific purposes such as the export of ships building materials or otherwise immediately canceled.

Thirty-three.—No transfers of German merchant shipping and no acceptance to any neutral flag are to take place after signature of the armistice.

Thirty-four.—Duration of Armistice.

Thirty-five.—The duration of the armistice is to be thirty days, with option to extend. During this period, on failure of execution of any of the above clauses, the armistice may be denounced by one of the contracting parties in a written notice.

Thirty-five.—Time Limit for Reply:

Thirty-five.—This armistice is to be accepted or refused by Germany within 72 hours of notification.

President Reviews the Consequences, the war thus comes to an end, leaving accepted these terms of armistice, as will be impossible on the German commandant's refusal.

people to enter it at its most critical juncture in such fashion and in such form as to contribute in a way of which we are all deeply proud, to the great result we know, too, that the object of the war is attained; the object upon which all free men had set their hearts and attained with a sweeping completeness which, even now do we not realize. Armed imperialism such as the men conceived who were but yesterday the most determined of the military caste of Germany will never seek to revise it. The arbitrary of the military caste of Germany which ones could afford that will suffice. It is only that we must be patient and helpful and mindful above all of the great hope and confidence that lie at the heart of what is taking place. Excesses accomplish nothing. Unhappy Russia has furnished abundant recent proof of this. Discards immediately defects of the military caste of Germany. More can be done, however, for a time should raise its head, a sober second thought will follow and a day of constructive action, if we help and do not hinder.

The present and all that it holds belongs to the nations and the peoples who preserve their self-government and the orderly process of their governments; the future to those who prove themselves true friends of mankind.

The Greater Conquest.

To conquer with arms is to make only a temporary conquest; to conquer the world by earning its esteem is to make permanent conquest. Our representatives in the supreme war council at Versailles have by unanimous resolution assured the peoples of the central empire that everything possible in the circumstances will be done to support the Central Powers in their efforts to sweep away all mine fields and obstructions laid by Germany outside German territorial waters and the portions of these are to be discontinued.
